Introducing the free 'Social Security Maximizer'

By Editorial Staff Thu, Jul 3, 2014

To access the Maximizer, subscribers (after logging in to the RIJ website) should simply click on the Social Security Maximizer image in the right navigation channel of the RIJ homepage.

Starting today, thousands of paid subscribers (individual and corporate) to Retirement Income Journal can sign up for and use the Social Security Maximizer, a tool whose name is self-explanatory. The tool is provided by the Omyen Corporation.

Based in Westwood, Mass., Omyen is a producer of software for financial advisers and their clients. Among other things, the company invented the Personal Financial Index, a benchmark that helps consumers monitor their progress toward financial goals.

To access the Maximizer, subscribers (after logging in to the RIJ website) should simply click on the Social Security Maximizer image in the right navigation channel of the RIJ homepage, which can be seen at right. On the subsequent page, click on either the registration or log-in button, depending on whether you are already registered to use the tool or are just getting started.

Please let us know how you like the tool, and whether it proves to be useful to you and your clients.
