
IRI announces enhanced members-only website

By Editor Test Thu, Jan 31, 2013

Known until 2008 at the National Association of Variable Annuities, the IRI has more than 500 members, including insurers, broker-dealers and distributors, asset managers, solution providers, and financial advisors.

A new website for members of the Insured Retirement Institute (IRI), called “myIRIonline.org,” will offer access to IRI’s print and electronic publications as well as public policy resource centers designed for financial advisors and broker-dealer/distributor members.

Known until 2008 at the National Association of Variable Annuities, the IRI has more than 500 members, including insurers, broker-dealers and distributors, asset managers, solution providers, and financial advisors.

The new myIRIonline.org offers:

- A new “advocacy headquarters” offering news and analysis related to the public policy issues affecting the insured retirement industry.
- A new education sub-site equipped with webinars, podcasts, and FINRA-reviewed client materials.
- A revamped research hub offering the latest economic commentary and data from across the insured retirement industry as well as IRI’s exclusive studies and research publications.
- New areas dedicated to providing the latest IRI news, conference information, and updates from the operations and technology sector.
