Quincy Krosby, a former Assistant Secretary of Commerce and U.S. representative to the International Monetary Fund, has joined Prudential Annuities in the newly created position of chief market strategist.

Quincy Krosby has joined Prudential Annuities in the newly created position of chief market strategist, reporting to Timothy Cronin, head of Investment Management for Prudential Annuities. She will “provide perspective on the financial markets and the economy to financial professionals, clients and individual investors,” the company said.

Krosby previously served as chief investment strategist for The Hartford and global investment strategist for Deutsche Bank Asset Management. She also worked in the global markets groups at Credit Suisse and ING Barings.

Earlier, Krosby was a U.S. diplomat, serving in Washington and United States embassies abroad, including a posting as Energy Attache at the U.S. Embassy in London. She also served as Assistant Secretary of Commerce and represented the United States to the International Monetary Fund. She received her master’s and doctoral degrees from the London School of Economics.
